The Houston Pride Band presents

!CARNAVAL!

Carnaval! Carnevale! Carnival! No, our spell-check is working just fine. Throughout history, different countries and cultures have incorporated feasting, fasting and festivities into their religions and practices. This accounts for all the different spellings of the same celebration. From France to Brazil and from Caribbean to Australia, this time of year is a celebration of the grandest kind—of food, fun and flesh.

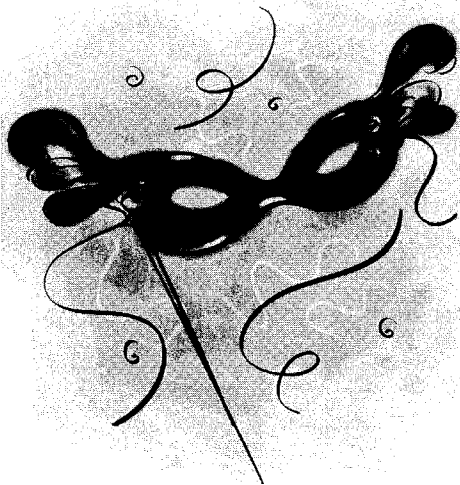

The earliest mention of Carnival is from 12th century Rome where the Pope and upper class Roman citizens watched a parade through the city, followed by the killing of steers and other animals. The purpose was to play and eat meat before Ash Wednesday, which marked the beginning of Catholic Lent—the forty-day fast leading up to Easter.

Today, we associate Carnival with parties, street parades, pageantry and costumes as well as the earthly pleasures of drinking, eating and lust . . . and don't forget the beads!!! We have partnered with Krewe of Olympus—Texas to kick the festivities off in a magnificent fashion.

Tonight, we invite you to join us in celebrating the history of Carnival—from New Orleans' Mardi Gras to Rio de Janeiro's Carnaval—and all points in between!

The Houston Pride Band is proud to welcome the Krewe of Olympus-Texas, Inc. as our very special guests for tonight's performance. Originally formed as a Mardi Gras Krewe in New Orleans in 1970, the Krewe of Olympus-Texas is now based in Houston. They are one of the largest predominately gay Krewes in the United States, although their membership is open to all. The Krewe's principal aims are to present theatrical and educational events that perpetuate and continue Mardi Gras traditions and to raise money for community charities. Since moving to Texas, the Krewe has donated over $350,000 to Houston and Dallas charitable organizations. For more information about the Krewe of Olympus-Texas, visit their website at www.mardigrastexas.com.

For a dozen years now, Houston readers -- gay and straight -- have been entertained and informed by the glossy monthly magazine OutSmart. Beyond the great Q&As with celebrities who are coming to town and meaty listings for folks unfamiliar with Montrose (or those who still think the city's gay world begins and ends in Montrose), there's plenty of other good stuff. Political columnists from the left and right anchor coverage of local pols and issues that are consistently thorough and fair. City Controller Annise Parker has a column dealing with everything from municipal issues to the trials she and her partner went through to adopt a child. Some of the mag's best features have explored the city's gay past. OutSmart is a crisp, well-designed must-read for the Inner Loop and beyond.

Program Notes

by Jason Stephens

The term Sol Y Sombra (Sun or Shade) is a reference to the practice of selling bullfight tickets on the sunny or shady side of the arena with the seats in the shade obviously more preferred. This march by George Gates (b. 1920) beautifully captures the lyrical, lush qualities of the Spanish Paso Doble and the traditional drama of the bullfight.

Brazil, originally Aquarela do Brasil (Watercolor of Brazil) is one of the most noted Brazilian patriotic songs, written by Ary Barroso (1903-1964) on a rainy night in 1939. This song marked the creation of a new genre, Samba-exaltação (Exaltation Samba), which was adopted by the nationalist dictatorship of Getúlio Vargas. The song has been successful through the years and has been played in many different styles, from a capella to orchestral arrangements. It has been covered by many artists, including Joao Gilberto, Chick Corea, Xavier Cugat, Chet Atkins, Django Reinhardt, and Tom Jobim.

The Miller's Dance comes from the ballet entitled El sombrero de tres picos (The Three-Cornered Hat) by Spanish composer Manuel de Falla (1876-1946). The ballet was produced by ballet impresario Serge Diaghilev with the set design and costumes done by artist Pablo Picasso. The ballet is about a governor who has fallen in love with a miller's wife and his attempts to flirt with her. The miller's dance takes place in the second act, while he and his wife are entertaining house guests, and is interrupted when the governor's bodyguard comes to arrest him.

Frank Ticheli (b.1958) is one of the preeminent composers in the concert band genre. His Cajun Folk Songs II (as well as his previous Cajun Folk Songs) was inspired by folk melodies whose precise origins are unknown. The folk melodies in Cajun Folk Songs II are freely combined with original music. The first movement, Ballad, is deeply personal and was written as an elegy, in memory of the composer's father who died in 1996. The second movement, Country Dance, evokes the energetic feeling and style of a Cajun two-step and was written in celebration of the birth of the composer's nephew later the same year.

Alberto Ginastera (1916-1983) was the most distinguished of all Argentinean composers. His ballet Estancia was commissioned in 1941 and turned into a dance-suite in 1943. The music depicts a young man from the city who has to prove himself on a ranch in order to win the love of a country girl. Danza Final is subtitled Malambo, the final proof of manhood (machismo). The malambo is danced only by the men, whose energetic steps are executed 'on the spot' and the 'winner' is the last man to remain standing. The scenario is particularly Argentinean, however, the music is more broadly South American.

Written by Spencer Williams (1889-1965) and first recorded by Louis Armstrong, Basin Street Blues is a jazz and blues standard and it commemorates one of the most famous streets in New Orleans. In the lyrics of the song, Williams calls Basin Street "Heaven on earth" and adds that it is "Where [he] can lose [his] Basin Street Blues."

Howard Cable (b. 1920) first came into prominence on Canadian radio as an arranger and conductor for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Those radio broadcasts from Toronto were heard throughout the United States, bringing his talent to the attention of the American public. In the early days of Canadian television, he was the conductor and arranger for a variety show, Showtime, starring Robert Goulet. Brazilian Festival is his arrangement for band that includes the well-known songs The Girl From Ipanema (by Jobim and de Moraes), Corcovado (by Jobim), and One Note Samba (by Jobim and Mendonca).

Alfred Reed (1921-2005) was one of America's most prolific and frequently performed composers, with more than two hundred published works for concert band, orchestra, and others to his name. Second Suite for Band consists of four movements, each one based on a characteristic song, march, or dance form usually associated with either a single Latin-American country or group of countries.

The first movement, Son Montuno, is based on a rhythm closely associated with the calypso, and seems to have had its origin in Cuba or the nearby Caribbean countries. Its basic 2-beat rhythm is performed lightly, and its melodies are also light, vivacious, and delicate in character.

The second movement, Tango ("Sargasso Serenade"), is not based on the familiar, highly charged Argentinean version of the tango, but rather the less frequently heard Brazilian interpretation, which is slower, smoother, and dreamier. The beats in the Brazilian version are played almost in a gliding fashion rather than in the emphatic manner of the Argentinean version.

The third movement, Guaracha, is a rollicking Argentinian drinking song, in effect a little scherzo, that bounces along its insouciant way to contrast with the preceding Tango and the succeeding Paso Doble.

The fourth movement, Paso Doble ("A la Corrida!"), is built on rhythms associated either with a dance or march and is Mexican in origin (but presumably brought over from Spain.) Though its name translates to "two-step," paso dobles are written in both duple and triple time—either for dancing or marching. This version combines the two patterns into quintuple meter (5/4) in a brilliant march to the bull ring on a festival day, ending with one of those typical long Spanish melodic lines in triple time that suggest both a dance and a march.

Out & About

Random Outburst is the jazz ensemble of the Houston Pride Band which was formed to expand the musical abilities of our members in new, challenging and fun directions. In addition to appearances at HPB concerts, they can be spotted jamming at various venues in the Houston/Galveston area.

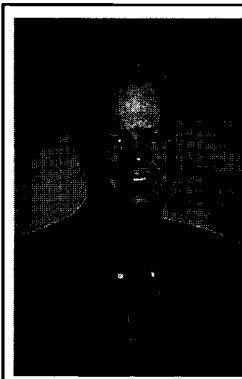

Recently the group was the featured entertainment at the Krewe of Olympus Twelfth Night Celebration as part of our partner agreement with the Krewe.

If you would like to book Random Outburst for your event, contact Andra Haviland at 281-412-3321.

If you are participating in the AIDS Walk Houston on Sunday, March 11th, be on the lookout for the Houston Pride Band. We will be on the sidelines cheering you on and performing for your entertainment.

On Saturday, March 17th, the band teams up with AssistHers for their second annual softball tournament at Memorial Park fields 4 & 5. The Houston Pride Band will staff a concession stand during the all-day tournament to raise funds for both organizations.

Pride season will soon be upon us and we are looking for musicians, color guard (flags/rifles) and auxiliary crew to march in the Pride parade. If you are interested in marching or performing with the Houston Pride Band at other events throughout the year, please contact Russell Ben Williams at russellbw@aol.com or call 832-265-3346.
